"THE KISS BURGLAR" AT LEXINGTON OPERA HOUSE

The principal attraction at the Lexington Opera House this week will be "The Kiss Burglar," which comes on Friday and Saturday evenings, with Saturday matinee. This is the season's musical comedy success, coming direct from the George M. Cohan Theatre, after a successful run in New York and other Eastern cities.

Those who have been seeking something new in musical comedy will find it in "The Kiss Burglar," which comes fresh from its Broadway run of six solid months at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York City. It contains novelty in incident and action and animated movement, pretty music, graceful dancing and charming acting. Glenn MacDonough wrote the book and lyrics and no doubt has more successes to his credit than any other librettist of the day, which embrace "The Algerian," the novelty musical comedy in which Marie Tempest met with her biggest success. "Babes in Toyland," "It Happened in Nordland," "The Midnight Sons," "Queen of the Movies," "Fades and Fancies," but in the work of his latest success, "The Kiss Burglar," he has surpassed himself. Raymond Hubbell composed the music and he knows what the American public likes. There are no melodic eccentricities, such as we have found within the last two years in some of the foreign operettas, but attractive and beautiful airs, easily caught and remembered, and that will soon be picked up and carried everywhere. Seats on sale Wednesday morning, February 12.
